LA NUOVA ZELANDA

trascorsa nel 1769. e 1770.
DAL COOK COMANDANTE
DELL' ENDEAVOUR
Vascello di S. M. BRITANNICA

VENEZIA 1778
Presso Antonio Zatta
Con Privilegio dell'Ecc.mo Senato.

SPIEGAZIONE

Le linee puntate dimostrano la strada del Vascello, e li numeri la profondità dell'acqua misurata in braccia Inglesi.
La parte della Costa, che non è terminata, non fu visitata.
‡ Luoghi ove il vascello diede fondo.
Rupi sopra l'acqua.
Rupi sotto l'acqua.
Var. Indica la Variazione della Bussola, misurata per gradi, e minuti.
Il Flusso proveniente dal Sud entra con forza nello Stretto di Cook, e la Marea vi è alta verso l'indici ore ne' plenilunj, e noviluni.

Siccome la presente Carta ha relazione con la Storia del Viaggio del Capitano Cook stampata in Parigi l'anno 1774, così si lasciarono i nomi de' luoghi nell' idioma, in cui furono chiamati, e se ne tradussero alcuni de' più comuni, de' quali se ne rende ragione nella Storia stessa.

he slumps.

The world goes away some more.

The night comes closer still.

.....

Blinks in weary vagueness.

Try.

Keep eyes. Them open. See the dark come.

Cant.

Nothing.

Badbadbad.

Fucking useless Clare.

Among the chaff and evil reedy voices round that hummock in unconsciousness he can hear the one he hates. Singing. It's too near the threshold for comfort, but go back up again....

Hey! shh Sant' Claro

dulce and gentle

a throbbing double kick, and the plateau tilts. Deeper, it welcomes. The voices are rejoicing.

"Ah no."

He hears himself say it. For one second the bonds at his throat loosen. And he is bitterly sick.

Another kick. A long raking almost harmless kick, but it tears across the skin of his chest. Across Kerewin's bruise island. Something breaks.

He feels the air stir, Joe slip after that kick.

Crush. And the dead weight doubles his pain.

The world tilted a little more, and helpless he began to slide but downwards, underground, into the box. Turning pinioned. Sound. A scream.

ROUND THE WORLD. 445

the morning, and in the mean time, I put the people at four watches, one watch to be always under arms; loaded and primed all the guns, fixed muskatoons in all the boats, and ordered the people who were not upon the watch, as expence in the quarters assigned them, at a moment's warning should bring a great number of canoes, some of them very large, and full of men, hovering upon the shore, and many familiar venturing to the ship, with hogs, fowls, and fruit, which we purchased of them, much to the satisfaction of both parties; and at sun-set, all the canoes round in as she those.

At six o'clock the next morning, we began to warp the ship up the harbour, and soon after, a great number of canoes came under her stern. As I perceived that they had hogs, fowls, and fruit on board, I ordered the gunner, and two mushipmen, to purchase them for knives, nails, beads, and other trinkets, at the same time prohibiting the trade with other persons on board. By eight o'clock, the number of canoes was greatly increased, and that that came last up were double, of a very large size, with twelve or fifteen Hawaiians in each. I observed, with some concern, that they appeared to be furnished rather for war than trade, having very little on board except round pebble stones; I therefore sent for Mr. Furneaux, my first lieutenant being still very ill, and ordered him to keep the fourth watch continually in their arms, while the rest of the people were warping the ship. In the mean time more canoes were continually coming off from the shore, which were freighted very differently from the rest, for they had on board a number of women, who were placed in a row, and who, when they came near the ship, made all the wanton gestures that can be conceived. While these ladies were practising their allurements, the large canoes, which were freighted with stones,

Warping up the ship.

Number of canoes increased.
